Flexibility is something claimed in varied degree for almost every car built—particularly cars of six or more cylinders. The 22-70 Mercer has but four cylinders (bore 3%, stroke 6%,), but it boasts a flexibility heretofore unknown to four-cylinder cars. It is a very difficult hill the Mercer will not take "on high," it is capable of a speed as low as five miles an hour on direct, and it has a quick pickup on high gear at slow speeds. The pull of the motor is steady and even at all rates of speed. Models For All Needs WHITING MOTOR COMPANY
